THE PUBLIC HIGHWAY.
The need of better roads is felt all over Manitoba, and possibly as much in this district as in any other parts of the province. This question is one which has been steadily shunned in the farmers' Institute meetings thus far. While almost all other questions have been pretty thoroughly dealt with, this has been left severely alone. We feel sure there are members in this Institute who could give some practical information on road making. A thorough discussion of the subject would do much good and some better plan than that at present in vogue might be hit upon. As the work is done now, the roads are not infrequently made worse than before. More good could be done with fifty cents a day computation money, and there is not a property owner in the district whose time is not worth more than that amount at the season of the year when the work is done. However, it is not a question of wages but of good roads. On all sides the town is surrounded by alternate steep hills and deep ravines, making the trails difficult to travel on at all times, and at certain seasons they are almost impassable. And if necessary to use them at all it is done with danger of damage to horse and vehicle. Knowing that it is impossible, under the present system, to cut down these hills and fill the ravines, the men usually spend their time in plowing a dirt guard for weeds to grow on, or in removing a few stones, as some one has said in description of the work. They plow considerable and scrape some—and the result is bad roads. But what is the use of them doing otherwise for any work they may do is very generally lost labor. It would cost no more to build a good road, in this district, than a bad one. Then let us have the good. The post, through wear and tear, etc., with the present bad roads, is dollars to dimes what it would be to build good roads. Since this country was first settled, the loss to farmers and others through wear and tear of harness and wagons, extra feed necessary for horses and loss of time on the roads would have more than paid for levelling every hill and grading every slough on the main trails to Elkhorn. With the present process, we stand good chances of hearing the last trumpet sound before we see a road fit to drive on. Farmers are anxious to breed horses that will sell well. Carriage horses have always brought good prices in the eastern provinces and the states, but what would be the use of our own people purchasing a good driver, if they must needs have the life almost jolted out of them if they take a drive in the country. The race which is the only piece of level ground in this town, around this town. Good roads also increase the value of farm lands fifty per cent in the eyes of intending purchasers. Pleasure and profit alike demand that the improvement of our public highways should be attended to by a rational manager before thousands of dollars have been wasted on haphazard work as has been done in other places. We would be glad to see the Institute take up the question, for it affects the farmers most directly.

THE ELKHORN ADVOCATE.
It is reported on what seems to be good authority, that the G. N. W. Company have decided to extend the road as far west as Beulah—this coming summer, then go north to Birtle and connect with M. and N. W. If this be true it will leave the district lying between Beulah and Fort Ellice without a railway for some years to come.

The leader of the Ontario Opposition suggests that the provincial expenditure could be very much reduced by holding sessions of the legislature but once in two years except in emergencies when an extra session could be called. This is the practice in several of the American States. Why don't some grit accuse him of associationist principles? A much more effective way would be to cut down expenses and insist on all civil servants doing a square day's work for a fair day's pay as was done by the Ontario government on first taking office—Eve Witless.

We presume the Whence does not refer to the $11,522 Mr. J. A. Shuart got for running the Hotel Gregg. That was a pretty "fair day's pay," we are not so sure about the "square day's work."

Another instance of the inconsistency of the great grit cry over the tariff is to be found in the following: Mr. Lyman M. Jones, formerly a Reform member of the Manitoba parliament, and a Minister of the government, is now in Ottawa representing the interest of an extensive manufacturing company in the east, asking the Dominion government not to make any change in the duty on agricultural implements.—Morien Monitor.

Notes by "Rambler."
Dear me, our worst fears are realized. The mountain has labored and brought forth a mouse, and Rambler is made responsible for it. We would respectfully point out the fact that we didn't say a word about the B. and N. Rule, and are quite willing that the Irish should have their Rule (or no rule) if they want it. What we did object to is the effort to make Canada a cat's paw to pull the old chestnut out of the fire. If ten million dollars were spent to content the union, we don't see why ten million more should be spent to dissolve it, unless they pay their own "piper." If they use their own money they might blow up the little island and Canada should have nothing to say. It was just such meddling which brought about the trouble in Hawaii. This "big head" is a bad disease, it makes people think they are quite capable of settling the affairs of the whole world. We have well known our Canadian Napoleon, Hon. Edward Blake.

Our Irish (?) friend has great respect for Anarchists and Fenians, with whom he classes Home Rulers. We very much doubt if Mr. Blake would consider this a compliment, for he has always prided himself on his respectability and loyalty. We feel like advising our friend to be more careful in handling the truth, for we have learned in our wanderings that the truth should not be spoken at all times. It may be true that Home Rulers belong to the same class as the cut throat gangs—Anarchists and Fenians—and yet it might be just as well not to say so. We really believe our friend can't be Irish after all, or he would know that Ireland, since 1871, has had tenant laws that are more favorable to the tenant, than any on the statute books of Canada or the United States. We believe if this pugnacious son of Erin had a farm, say at Elkhorn, he would have a right to rent it. Having rented, he would have a perfect right to live in Winnipeg, Toronto, or even in Ireland, if he wished. In other words he would have the right to be an "absentee landlord."

Our friend didn't remember our roving disposition, and should be again afflict himself and others with such an "Irish bull," we beg that he may not feel offended if we are not "at home," and fail to reply.

The ladies, God bless them! We know the ladies of Elkhorn were made of the right stuff, and longed to be man's equal. For longer than we can remember they have been his superior, but now that they have resolved to come down to his level, they will be a true help to him—to build a new world by the way, building fires is a pretty bad job this cold weather, and we would like the married men of the town to have the thought of woman's outrage before. However, it will not help other parties very much now, for the winter is almost over. We sincerely hope that the new arrangement will be in working order before another winter.

As we were rambling around town last Monday evening we heard of an "illegal" school meeting being held, but knowing by experience the results of meddling with things "illegal," we thought it best to stay away. However, we are glad to learn from the ADVOCATE that nothing very bad was done, and that the ratepayers are in favor of doing the square thing by the young people of the town and country who wish to equip themselves for the solemn business of making true men and women of themselves, and not dependents on charity or their parents' bounty. The people of the town certainly make mistakes but you can depend on them to help along those who are trying to help themselves.

We were a little, yes more than a little surprised, on rambling over to the station last Saturday evening, to find that old (old) chestnut revived. "Behold the child by nature's kindly law, pleased with a rattle and tickled with a 'straw.' A more fitting reception could have easily been provided for men who upheld the honor of Elkhorn in the sporting world, and paid their own expenses while doing it."

If those settlers reported to be coming from the United States, will leave all grumbling and pleuro-pneumonia behind them, we will feel very glad to see them. Of course the quarantine will prevent the latter from being brought in, but grumbling is such a common disease, in this country now, that we fear nothing can prevent or cure it—not even forty bushels to the acre and a dollar a bushel.

Mr. O'Mally is gaining for himself a lot of cheap advertising, and at the same time is manufacturing a lot of election material by his attack on the legal profession. We fail to see how the repeal of the act which incorporated the Law Society, is going to lessen the lawyer's charges. Evidently Mr. O'Mally is after a popular election cry to gain farmers' votes. That is all the go now. Farmers' votes are as a premium in fact worth more than their notes in the estimation of such men. It is so great a compliment to his constituents to have it understood that they can be caught by such chaff.

WHAT IS "VIRTUE"?

Is It One Thing in Man and Another in Woman?

TWO STANDARDS OF MORALITY.

Why Should a Woman and a Man? Opinions by Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony.

THE question of the standard of morality for men and women is one that has been discussed for centuries. It is a question that has been discussed in the most learned and able of men, and it is a question that has been discussed in the most learned and able of women. It is a question that has been discussed in the most learned and able of men, and it is a question that has been discussed in the most learned and able of women.

When we speak of a moral law, we mean a law that is binding on all men and women. It is a law that is binding on all men and women, and it is a law that is binding on all men and women. It is a law that is binding on all men and women, and it is a law that is binding on all men and women.

One of the most common objections to the moral law is that it is too high. It is too high, it is too high, it is too high. It is too high, it is too high, it is too high. It is too high, it is too high, it is too high. It is too high, it is too high, it is too high.

Another common objection to the moral law is that it is too low. It is too low, it is too low, it is too low. It is too low, it is too low, it is too low. It is too low, it is too low, it is too low. It is too low, it is too low, it is too low. It is too low, it is too low, it is too low.

There is a third common objection to the moral law. It is that it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old.

There is a fourth common objection to the moral law. It is that it is too new. It is too new, it is too new, it is too new. It is too new, it is too new, it is too new. It is too new, it is too new, it is too new. It is too new, it is too new, it is too new. It is too new, it is too new, it is too new.

There is a fifth common objection to the moral law. It is that it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old.

There is a sixth common objection to the moral law. It is that it is too new. It is too new, it is too new, it is too new. It is too new, it is too new, it is too new. It is too new, it is too new, it is too new. It is too new, it is too new, it is too new. It is too new, it is too new, it is too new.

There is a seventh common objection to the moral law. It is that it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old.

There is an eighth common objection to the moral law. It is that it is too new. It is too new, it is too new, it is too new. It is too new, it is too new, it is too new. It is too new, it is too new, it is too new. It is too new, it is too new, it is too new. It is too new, it is too new, it is too new.

There is a ninth common objection to the moral law. It is that it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old.

There is a tenth common objection to the moral law. It is that it is too new. It is too new, it is too new, it is too new. It is too new, it is too new, it is too new. It is too new, it is too new, it is too new. It is too new, it is too new, it is too new. It is too new, it is too new, it is too new.

There is an eleventh common objection to the moral law. It is that it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old. It is too old, it is too old, it is too old.

THRIFTY BETTY GREEN

Pays $7 a Week for Her Board and Room.

She is Worth $80,000,000.

With a fortune estimated at $80,000,000, Mrs. Betty Green, the richest woman in America, lives in a dingy little room in a Brooklyn boarding house, and eats in the kitchen, paying $7 a week for board and room. Although she has a husband, son and daughter, she has no home, but migrates from boarding-house to boarding-house, caring for two things—her money and her privacy.

The eccentricities of this Green in politics are as much of the case. She lives the life of a roving hermit because it gives her an excuse to refuse to pay taxes on her personal property. Whatever a tax collector is fortunate enough to locate her she sends him away empty-handed on the ground that she is a non-resident of the city or county. Mrs. Green has been known to throw her shoulders to the yoke of a temporary residence from the public that at no time within ten years have more than a score of persons known where she slept or where she ate her meals.

Here is a pen picture of the woman in her daily garb. She is well above the head and shoulders of the average woman, and is a good deal over the top. Her hair is not only square-jawed, but her whole face is a study in the lines of a Greek temple. She has a high forehead, a straight nose, thin lips, and a broad, gray eye, set well back under the brow. Her hair, once brown, is now a faded yellow, and is combed down straight on each side of her forehead.

There is an aggressive air in the pale of the head and the body. She walks with a quick, snuffling stride. Her features are as sharp as a needle, and her eyes are as sharp as a needle. She has a sharp nose, a sharp eye, and a sharp mouth. She has a sharp nose, a sharp eye, and a sharp mouth. She has a sharp nose, a sharp eye, and a sharp mouth.

She wears a faded black cloth dress that she paid $1.50 for at a second-hand store in 1922. It is faded, and the buttons are old and rusty. Over this was a $1.00 black cloth jacket, bought two weeks ago after she had called once a week for three or four months to inspect the price, which was originally $2.00. After she had bought the jacket she paid $1.00 for it.

Her hair is small and black, and unobtrusive enough in appearance from the front, but the ribbon with which it was fastened cannot conceal a great patch of faded yellow that shows when she turns her head. She wears heavy earrings, and her hair is combed down straight on each side of her forehead.

Once in a while Mrs. Green "dresses up." She has a strange passion for dressing up. She has a strange passion for dressing up. She has a strange passion for dressing up. She has a strange passion for dressing up. She has a strange passion for dressing up. She has a strange passion for dressing up. She has a strange passion for dressing up. She has a strange passion for dressing up.

She is a very old woman, and she is a very old woman. She is a very old woman, and she is a very old woman. She is a very old woman, and she is a very old woman. She is a very old woman, and she is a very old woman. She is a very old woman, and she is a very old woman. She is a very old woman, and she is a very old woman. She is a very old woman, and she is a very old woman.

The losses paid during the year amount to only $170,128. In order to have such a showing the company must be unusually lucky or very careful in the acceptance of risks.

There will be an open meeting of the temperance society in the town hall on Tuesday evening next. A programme consisting of vocal and instrumental music, dialogues, recitations, etc., is being prepared, and it is expected that the entertainment will greatly eclipse the one held by the society last month. A collection will be taken up to defray the expenses of the hall.

A gang of men are busy hauling ice from the Hyestone for Mr. T. D. Cavanagh's summer meat trade. Mr. T. Simington had a very narrow escape from being instantly killed on Tuesday while thus engaged.

A huge piece of ice had been lifted above his head to an open door in the store house, when the party above lost his hold of it and it came back on to the sleigh. Tom saw his danger in time to avoid the ice falling on his head. As it was it struck his heels, considerably bruising them.

Last Thursday night Aurora appeared with more than usual splendor. Fleecy clouds seemed to roll across the sky, succeeded by dashes of most brilliant crimson. These frequently arranged themselves into arches of varying hues. At one time a beautiful white arch bordered by bright red appeared in the zenith and lasted about fifteen minutes. The blinding of the colors produced a grand effect.

Beulah.

The great event of the season, the Foresters' concert is over, and in spite of the inclemency of the weather, which had been blowing for a week, it proved an unparalleled success. The Beulah Hall was crowded to repletion, and if it had proved to be a fine evening a great many people would have had to turn away.

Mr. A. D. Clyden acted as a very efficient chairman. Mrs. Breen opened the concert with a very pretty solo on the organ.

Mr. Doyell then favored the audience with the parody, "In the Gloaming," after which Mr. England gave us a very pretty song.

Mr. Breen then gave us "The Milwaukee Fire," which was received with great applause. Mr. R. A. Coote favored the audience with a very spirited march on the banjo which was particularly well rendered.

Refreshments were provided and the evening was brought to a close all too soon by singing the National anthem.

We are very sorry to say that Mr. John McDougall succumbed to his illness on the 21st. He will be greatly missed by all the travelling public, and will be a great loss to the town of Birtle and the district generally.

It is reported that the North West Central is coming to Beulah in the spring, and from thence on to Birtle, but "quien sabe."

The officers of Court Beulah 390 were resplendent on the night of the concert with their new badges, and seemed to imagine they were giving the girls quite a treat.

San Francisco, Feb. 21.—Mrs. Sophia Beresford, wife of a prominent dairyman died last night of glanders. Four weeks ago Mr. Beresford purchased a diseased horse for the family to drive. A few days later, while Mrs. Beresford was standing near the horse's head, the animal sneezed in her face. Soon afterwards she was stricken with chills and pains and swelling of the forehead. She finally became so bad that she was removed to the hospital, and there the nature of the disease was discovered. The whole upper portion of the woman's face was eaten away by dread disease. The husband and children have also been exposed, and their condition is being closely watched. The health authorities have killed the horse, and will cause the arrest of the driver, who sold it to Beresford at a price ridiculously low.
